Assignment 2
Pharmacology
Respiratory System
Structure and Function of the Respiratory System
 The respiratory system is a complex system consisting of the trachea, bronchi, bronchioles, and alveoli. It is responsible for the exchange of gases between the atmosphere and the body tissues. The system is divided into the upper respiratory tract (nose, mouth, and pharynx) and the lower respiratory tract (larynx, trachea, bronchi, bronchioles, and alveoli). The upper respiratory tract is involved in the warming and humidification of inhaled air, while the lower respiratory tract is responsible for the actual gas exchange. The alveoli are the site of gas exchange, where oxygen from the atmosphere diffuses into the blood, and carbon dioxide from the blood diffuses into the atmosphere. The process of gas exchange is driven by the partial pressures of the gases. The respiratory system is also involved in the regulation of blood pH and the removal of volatile toxins from the body.

Assignment 4
Pharmacology (Respiratory Medications)
 There are many drugs which are used in the treatment of respiratory disorders. These drugs are classified into different groups based on their mechanism of action and the type of respiratory disorder they are used to treat. The main groups of respiratory medications are:

- 1) Inhaled corticosteroids: These drugs are used to reduce inflammation in the airways and prevent the symptoms of asthma and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD).
- 2) Beta-2 agonists: These drugs relax the muscles in the airways, making it easier to breathe. They are used to treat asthma and COPD.
- 3) Anticholinergics: These drugs block the action of acetylcholine, which causes the muscles in the airways to contract. They are used to treat COPD.
- 4) Mucolytics: These drugs help to break down mucus, making it easier to cough up. They are used to treat COPD and other respiratory conditions.
- 5) Decongestants: These drugs reduce swelling in the nasal passages, making it easier to breathe. They are used to treat the common cold and allergies.

 The use of respiratory medications should be supervised by a healthcare professional.

Background

General knowledge of drug delivery systems is essential for the development of new drugs. The delivery system is a critical part of the drug product and its development. It is a complex system that involves the selection of the drug, the formulation, and the delivery system. The development of a drug delivery system is a multi-step process that involves the selection of the drug, the formulation, and the delivery system. The development of a drug delivery system is a multi-step process that involves the selection of the drug, the formulation, and the delivery system.

The history of drug delivery systems is a long one. It dates back to the early days of medicine when people used natural substances to treat their ailments. The development of drug delivery systems has been a continuous process that has led to the development of many different types of drug delivery systems. The development of drug delivery systems is a multi-step process that involves the selection of the drug, the formulation, and the delivery system.

Classification of drug delivery systems

ESOMEPRAZOLE MAGNESIUM & DOMPERIDONE

MECHANISM OF ACTION

Esomeprazole inhibits the H+/K+ ATPase enzyme (proton pump inhibitor), which is responsible for gastric acid secretion in the parietal cells of the stomach, and irreversibly binds the final step of acid production.

Domperidone increases gastric motility as it acts by inhibiting the action of dopamine and causes gastric emptying.

Domperidone stimulates gastric motility by acting as a competitive antagonist at dopamine D<sub>2</sub> receptors.
